A black and white photograph of a group of seven people standing outdoors in a wooded area. From left to right: a man in a dark suit, a man in a dark suit and tie, a woman in a dark dress holding a book, a man in a light-colored jacket, a woman in a light-colored dress, a man in a dark suit, and a woman in a light-colored dress. They are standing on a path or clearing, with large trees and bare branches in the background.

OUR homes, our schools, our churches, and the streets of our towns and cities are not the same. Our boys are gone.
Boys are scattered the world over. On the land, in caves and fox-holes, upon the seas, underneath the seas, and in the air—on more than sixty battle-fields. They fight for us that we may have our homes, schools, and churches, our freedom to worship God, our freedom of press and speech, our freedom of individual initiative and achievement. Some of our girls have gone to serve their country. God bless our boys and our girls. That they may know that we pray for them, that we have not forgotten them, we dedicate to them our 1944 "Darda."

As this year of 1943-44 flashes across our memory we shall desire to live again through our happy days which were spent at Trevecca. We can think of the times when we have studied, worked, and played together; and shared each others' joys and disappointments. If in the future the material which is here collected is the means of recalling these precious memories our purpose will then have been accomplished and our aim attained.

UNITED TOGETHER

TREVECCA

We are proud of our college on the hill,
Dear old Trevecca that makes our hearts
to thrill;
Of her Christian standard we will sing,
While going in the service of our King.

(Chorus)

Blessing to the nations we will be,
Telling of salvation full and free;
Honor to our College we will bring,
In loyal service to our Saviour King.

Ours are teachers loyal, kind, and true,
Serving the Lord in ev'rything they do;
To them trying problems we may bring
For guidance in the service of our King.

Christian fellowship we have each day,
Serving God in the blessed holy way;
Bible school we find is just the thing,
It helps us in the service of our King.

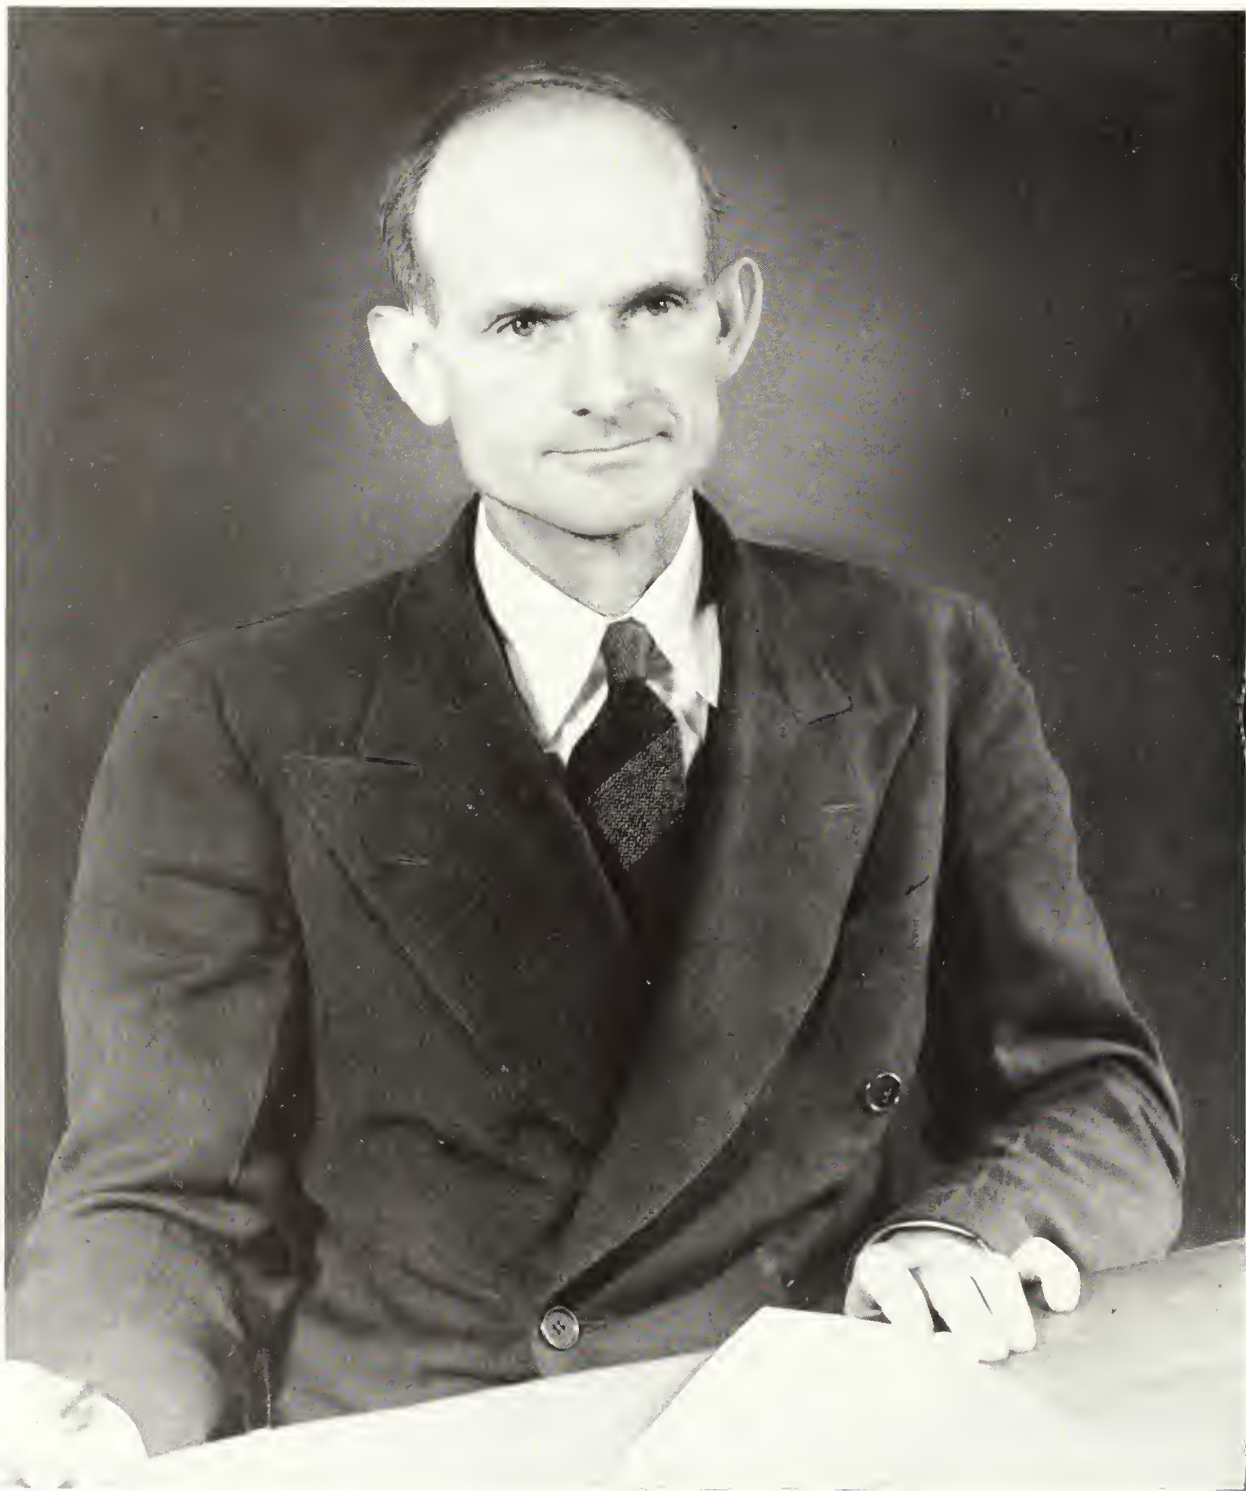

We are building for a future day,
When the Nation's eyes will turn our way;
Stone and mortar are a minor thing,
We're building for the service of our King.

DOCTOR A. B. MACKEY, M.A., LL.D.

A Message From the PRESIDENT

The battlefield is a market place where the usual market values are compared to those values which are not bought with money. A soldier is not concerned about the fifty dollars a month that he is paid for risking his life. In fact, in many cases fifty thousand dollars would not be acceptable.

There are probably two outstanding classes of soldiers in a world war—one who is facing realities with his eyes open, and another who goes blindly into the conflict, rendering about as much service in dying for the cause as he does in living for it, because when he lives for it his life is not vital. When he dies for it someone else is directing his action and he is in no position to do anything about the results.

Among those who go to the battlefield to face realities are those who are prepared and those who are unprepared, and those who are prepared will do the better fighting and will be in the better position to conserve the results of the victory when the war is over. Those who are not prepared, as a rule, are cowardly and fail to be good soldiers, and certainly are in no position to profit by the victory or defeat.

Those who are prepared are those who have been taught the real values of those things found in the market places of life. Food, clothing, and social approval have not been the important commodities to them. Therefore, they are victorious regardless of how the war goes. Their nation may lose in the war but they do not lose because the important thing in their lives is not power or official position. They have been investing in Christian character. It has never changed in value since the beginning of time. Banks may fail and nations may fall, but those boys and girls at Trevecca College—who have been here before, who are here now, and who will come later—investing their time for the building of character which wins in peace, in war, in life, in death, are wise. The storehouse from which they get their goods does not require ration points, and the bank in which they keep their deposits will never fail.

"Thy word have I hid in my heart"

Our Purpose FIRST THINGS FIRST

A man's success in his pursuits is conditioned upon his applying himself most seriously to the "firsts" among his tasks. Such an emphasis recognizes the primary of the prime, the majority of the major. It does not preclude, albeit, the existence of secondary factors, which, though they may not be determinants of success and failure, are nevertheless essential to the full attainment of one's highest goals. To him who gives first attention to the firsts in his work, success is the looked-for prize; him whose strivings encompass both prime and tributary matters in his realm of endeavor two-fold success awaits.

Where the task of the workman is to fashion mind and spirit, "clean hands and pure heart" ("the Kingdom of God") are the firsts he must seek. The person who has passed through these prime crises of experience has met the highest challenge and filled the deepest need of human existence. He is prepared for death and for eternity. If thereupon his mind be quickened and his spirit enriched through discipline and cultivation, to him are added life's most vital auxiliary endowments. He is prepared for life and for service. God First, Others Second, Self Last.

The future success of our democracy depends on the intelligence of its people and the discretion with which they exercise its political, social, economic, and Christian principles and ideals.

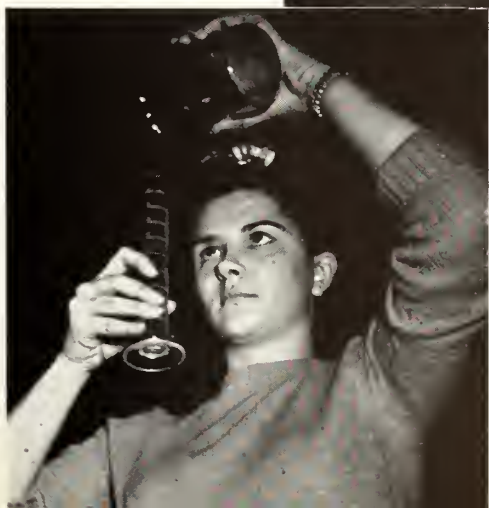

Education For A Greater SERVICE

Teaching weaves a strong and intertwining thread into the characters of mortals. It commences at the mother's knee and consists of every word spoken within the hearing of the individual, every sentence read by him, and every attitude displayed before him throughout his life's duration. But if teaching be so ever-present with us and if it be thus inescapable, there rests upon mankind the constant obligation of willful choice of teachers. Daily each learner must choose over his course of study and weave a segment of the character he is to bear eternally. The daily woven piece in life's broad pattern portrays unerringly the image the weaver has of the distant whole while the final pattern will reflect unfailingly the daily fabrications that went into its fashioning.

In schools and colleges rules should be learned for discharging wisely each day's responsibilities, principles apprehended for planning with broad vision life's whole design and habits formed for fitting the principles logically to each particular circumstance in life's detailed skein. The character shaped after this threefold motif of instruction rewards in rich bounty the efforts of teacher and pupil and widens its compass multifold in service at teaching others.

Christian education enables us to better serve man and God.

We appreciate the opportunity which is afforded us to obtain an education in a spiritual atmosphere.

Trevecca's Newest MCCLURKAN MEMORI

AL AUDITORIUM

On Tuesday, February 8, 1944, students, faculty, and friends of Trevecca assembled in the Alumni Auditorium of the McClurkan Memorial Building for the dedication of the new building.

The building was named in memory of the Reverend J. O. McClurkan, the founder and first president of the college. Rev. McClurkan put intensive labor, fervency of spirit, achieving faith, and effective prayer into the founding and advancement of the school.

The construction of the building was begun in the Spring of 1941 and was completed at an approximate cost of fifty thousand dollars.

The main auditorium, known as the Alumni Auditorium, is capable of seating comfortably one thousand persons. Besides the main auditorium, there are three offices, a library reading room and an extra stack room, and eleven classrooms.

The McClurkan Memorial Building has been dedicated unto God that it might serve the same high purpose for which Rev. J. O. McClurkan gave himself to establish Trevecca Nazarene College.

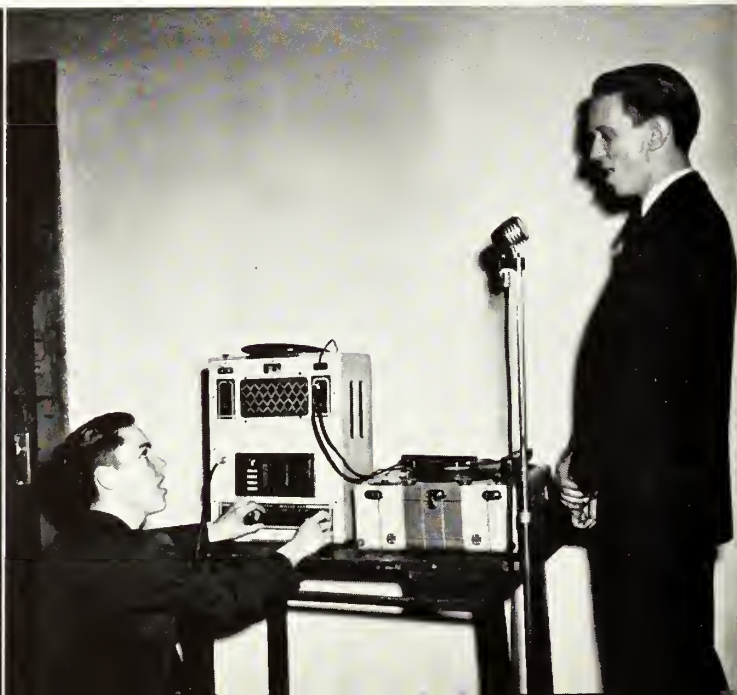

The completion of the McClurkan Memorial Building has added greatly to the appearance of the campus. Its tall stately columns give the surroundings an atmosphere of southern aristocratic life.

The Trevecca College Chorus, during the current year 1943-44 under the direction of Mrs. Ruth Bennett and Miss Margaret Doggett, assistant, made many inspiring and highly entertaining appearances throughout the city of Nashville. These appearances were accompanied by quartets, trios, all-girls' chorus, solos, whistling and instrumental numbers, and special music by the Trevecca College Orchestra.

In The Realm Of The FINER ARTS

"No work of art is worth the bones of a Pomeranian Grenadier" was the accented pronouncement of a Prussian militarist. Past mouths have witnessed eloquently to the tragic issuance of this philosophy. From such a conception of values men have thought it right to disregard truth, astute to convince by night, pious to confound by stealth, and manly to exhibit brute nature. The melancholy consequences are hatred, world chaos, and war. He who would multiply sorrow to himself and others may drink of this rank cup of false creed to its foulest dregs.

By contrast, Christian thinking sees in the finer arts a creator's priceless benefaction, a token of man's relation to God. In accordance with this high postulate art remains to humanity a sublime medium for speaking truth, a mouthpiece for uttering wisdom; by this premise "art is power"; after this judgment nature itself is the "art of God." Greed, strife, and dissention congeal to stiff inactivity in awe of this divine cunning which man shares with deity. He who would serve God and man in truth, wisdom, piety, and power may drink deeply at the fountain of reverence for the arts.

The joy of being friends is just; a simple code of faith and trust.

FRIENDSHIPS Are Everlasting

We are constantly making new friends and when we depart from the halls of Trevecca we may be inclined to forget the old friends of our school days. But we should always remember that old friends are gold, new friends are silver; and friendships that have stood the test of time and change are surely best.

Among the satisfying sentiments that are common to humanity none is more constant and abiding than friendships. Respect, liking, admiration, infatuation—all pleasant in the feeling—have roots that are easily plucked up. These are the beginnings, the starter-growth, for the great prime mover that connotes a friend. They lengthen their reach in sunshine but may shrink and be lost in minuteness when shadows hover in prolong. They make brighter the lucen skies of prosperity but may lose their radiance in the darkness of misfortune and transmute into their antipodes.

True friendships form through patient growth. They are nurtured oftentimes on the shocks of adversity. They persevere in constancy "without either flower or veil." Nature and religion are their binding cords, nobility and magnanimity their great endearments. They only reach full flower when animated by divine fertilization, but thus quickened they radiate splendid beauty in those who share them and timeless service for the doubting on-looker who aghast contemplates their silent precepts.

Friendship cheers the faint and weary,
Makes the timid spirit brave,
Warns the erring, lights the dreary,
Smooths the passage to the grave.

Friendship—pure unselfish friendship
All through life's allotted span
Nurtures, strengthens, widens, lengthens,
Man's relationship with man.

In The Heart Of The SOUTHLAND

Trevecca College is advantageously situated in one of the leading educational centers of the South. Nashville has been called the "Athens of the South" because of its numerous colleges, universities, and other educational institutions. Chief among these is the recently constructed Joint University Library which affords unusual opportunity for advanced college students interested in research. Other library facilities include the libraries of Peabody College and Vanderbilt University, and the State and Carnegie libraries.

Nashville has played an important role in the history of the South. Many points of historical interest may be visited by students of Trevecca. Points of major interest are the following: battlefields of the Civil War; Ft. Negley, a replica of a confederate fort; the homes of Andrew Jackson and Sam Davis; and Ft. Nashborough, a replica of the first settlement in the vicinity of Nashville. The Maxwell

House, dating from pre-Civil War days, is still an attraction to visitors of the city. Being located in the capital city of the state, Trevecca offers students the opportunity of visiting the state legislature and learning in a practical way how law-making bodies and state governments are operated.

The city of Nashville has many industrial plants which may be of help to the students who must do outside work in order to attend college. The city also has one of the best airports in the South, located approximately four miles from the Trevecca campus.

Nashville is a city of churches. Some of these date back to the early frontier days when only a small settlement represented what is now a metropolis. There are eighteen Nazarene churches in and around the city giving ample opportunity for religious activities. Our students attend most of these churches and render assistance in carrying on the work.

Friendship is the foundation for a comradeship that stays.

We are glad to present a faculty that we have many reasons to love and appreciate. Their scholastic attainments are of high standing. All of them have taught for many years in holiness schools and they have developed outstanding skills in teaching and dealing with young people. This year we are honored by having an instructor who received a Ph.D. from Vanderbilt University in December. Dr. Gresham received his Bachelor's degree from Bethany and Master's degree from Oklahoma State University. He is a member of the Phi Delta Lambda. A number of our other faculty members have Master's degrees and some have worked on their Doctor's degrees. We feel that young people of the South who are desirous of an education will find no better instructors anywhere.

We appreciate our faculty for not only scholastic attainments, but for a remarkable insight into the needs of a rapidly growing institution and a devoted love for training Christian men and women. Their beautiful characters and lives so inspire and encourage us, that any attempt in words to give an adequate appreciation of them is futile. Without their consecrated lives and untiring efforts our college could not push forward.

To us they have been teachers, friends, counsellors, and have given of their time, talents, and abilities to the forming of our characters and the upbuilding of our Alma Mater.

We thank God for their labor with us and under their wise supervision we anticipate greater things for the students of Trevecca in the future.

 Better this than corn and wine;
 Keep us worthy, God in heaven,

 We will aye be true to thee!

Little, little can I give thee,

MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME

The sun shines bright on my old Kentucky home,
'Tis summer, the darkies are gay,
The corntops ripe and the meadows in the bloom
While the birds make music all the day,
Weep no more my lady,
Oh, weep no more today,
We'll sing one song for the old Kentucky Home,
For my old Kentucky home far away.

A large group of students and faculty posing on the steps of a stone building with a large American flag in the background. The group is arranged in several rows, with some individuals sitting on the steps in the front. The building features stone walls and white-framed doorways. The American flag is prominently displayed, hanging across the middle of the group. The students are dressed in mid-20th-century attire, including dresses, sweaters, and coats. The overall scene suggests a formal group portrait, likely for a yearbook or official school record.

We are a group of thirty-five students who have rambled in from the various states of the union outside of the Southeastern School Zone. We have sailed forth on the Sea of Knowledge from ports of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, Arkansas, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, and Texas to Trevecca, seeking to explore new fields in education, religion, and society.

M U S I C

The Music Department of Trevecca College participated in many activities during 1943-44. This department furnished music for the dedication service of the McClurkan Memorial Building, chapel and vesper services throughout the year, programs in the churches of Nashville, and the Easter cantata, "Olivet to Calvary."

The Music Department sponsored programs during the year, some of which are "A Sermon in Song" by Reverend T. T. Liddell, several studio recitals, and one large recital during the Spring quarter.

Offerings of appreciation, which amounted to over one hundred dollars, were received during the year, and went toward the advancement of the Music Department.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Christian work in its simplest form is the presentation of Jesus Christ to a sin-diseased humanity as the only panacea for that disease. It is the persuasion of men that there is a hell to shun, a heaven to gain, and a life worth living. (Christian work is the pleading with men to accept the way of scriptural salvation and biblical living.)

Trevecca College trains its students to better work for Christ by affording them opportunities for practical Christian work. This training is received by conducting services in churches, missions, at street services, and in public institutions such as the jail, an orphanage, workhouses, and hospitals.

Through the means of songs, prayers, testimonies, Scripture readings, and sermons each year hundreds of needy persons are saved, reclaimed, sanctified, comforted, and encouraged in their preparation for eternity.

The membership of the Big Sisters' Club is composed of those girls who have spent at least one year in Trevecca. The purpose of this organization is to help orientate the new dormitory girls and make them feel at home. In the beginning of the year each big sister is given a little sister to whom she is to give guidance during the entire year.

Part of the yearly program is an outing or social given by the big sisters to aid in getting acquainted. After the little sisters have been sufficiently instructed in laws and regulations, they entertain their big sisters in appreciation for their helpfulness.

CAP SISTERS CLUB

HARDY HALL

CALL MEETING 20 YEARS HENCE

Come hither, Cap Sisters, as in days of yore.

Is the band all together? Call the roll as before.

May, Emma and Ada; yes, Alph and Bea,

There's Dottie and Ruby, Mrs. Shelton and me.

There's Novis and Sarah—here's Margaret and "Lu."

Now let us recall an instance or two.
I'm sure we remember those long tangled strings;

Ruby's follow-for-treasures was the funniest thing.

May's midnight party—the gift—a white cat.

The Christmas tree party—we had fun
at that.

Oh, the house coat party we had in the hall

For Mrs. Shelton, our sponsor (she was sleepiest of all),

The twin celebration for Clara and "Lu"—
Such ice cream and cookies—the surprise they went through.

But ever so often left around with a note
Were goodies unthought of or pranks by a ghost.

But of all of the fun we had through the year,

Of the smiles we created of our deeds
of good cheer

Was the dummy for Ada and Alpha that day

Dressed up in the corner while they were away.

So on through the years of our lives that we live

Strive ever for others cheer and sunshine to give.

TROUBLES

Getting out this Annual is no picnic.
If we print jokes, people say we are silly;
If we don't, they say we are too serious.
If we clip things from magazines
We are too lazy to write them ourselves;
If we don't we are stuck on our stuff.
If we stick too close to the job all day
We ought to be out hustling up news;
If we do get out and try to hustle
We ought to be on the job in school.
If we don't print contributions
We don't appreciate true genius;
And if we print them
The annual is filled with junk.
Now like as not some guy will say
We swiped this from some other book. WE DID.

The editor, business manager, and sales manager wish to thank the staff and sponsors for their willing cooperation. We are likewise indebted to Mr. John T. Benson of Benson Printing Company.

If you in the future leaf through these pages and enjoy the memories they bring back to you, and are inspired to be of service to God and man, we will feel we have accomplished our aim.

And join with the worshiping throng,
And tomorrow you'll face with a confident grace
And a faith that is steadfast and strong.
